

To a wonderful mother,

This is the most difficult letter we have ever written to someone we don't know. We are so humbly honored that you would consider us as adoptive parents for your child. Even though we have never met you, we have been praying for you for a very long time. We cannot even begin to imagine what you are going through but we trust that God will bring something beautiful out of it. We have a lot of love to give and we appreciate this chance to give it. We promise that we will take every chance to make your baby know that they are loved, that the first evidence of love was when you made the difficult decision to give them a chance at life. We will teach them to Love God above all, to be compassionate and to appreciate the little things in life. We want to be able to provide them with the things that we never had, travel to places together that we've never been to and adventure together as a happy family. We believe that education is very important and we will make sure that whatever they decide to study will be something they are passionate about. We will always encourage a desire for helping others and building lasting relationships. As much as I may write, a piece of paper will never hold the weight of our gratitude for giving us the chance to make a family. We pray the Lord gives you strength and peace as you make this difficult decision.

With Much Love

Lassie and Kent.
